

Well, I am in college now (Oklahoma University). Unfortunately, I will be busy now so I may not be able to write articles every month like before. I will still consider anything you submit.

So for this month I will ask a question. With your permission, I would like to publish some of your answers in the next newsletter.

What is the purpose of life on this earth? What is it that we are supposed to be striving for while we are alive? How are we to define our goals?

This is a question that is especially important at the time of life I am at now. At this point in my life I will have to make choices that will affect the rest of my life. I am sure that there are other readers who are also at or near this stage of life. I would love to hear your thoughts on this question.
